THE SANGLEY REVOLT AND ITS FLAGS
(From my website : www.watawat.net )

In 1603 an ethnic Chinese revolt took place right after a visit to Manila by three official Mandarin Chinese representatives who arrived in a large fleet of ships. They said they were searching for "a mountain of gold". This claim prompted the Spanish to conclude that there was an imminent invasion from China in the making. At the time the local Chinese outnumbered the Spaniards by twenty to one, and Spanis...

“Well, isn’t that just a plane-load full of stupid?” said a shocked and annoyed Nepal Prime Minister Sushil Koirala.

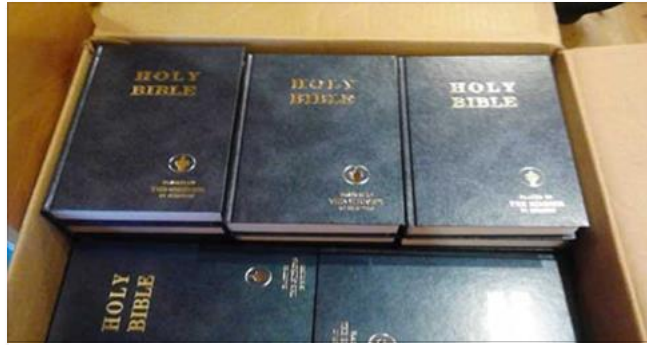

“It is not a surprise to see the evangelical vultures are playing with the life of the people in distress. This is what they do everywhere when people are suffering.”

“We cannot eat Bibles. We cannot use them as shovels.”

“Nepal desperately needs food and medicine and equipment and workers not best-seller books.” “If you are praying for Nepal, we thank you,” said Koirala. “But I humbly ask that you also get up and actually do something, donate, encourage others to donate just please do not send us any more Bibles.”

"Where are the "fabulists and counterfeiterers, Ballad-Mongers and Cranks of ev'ry Radius, Masters of Disguise" that Pynchon featured so prominently in his works? And what are they saying?

These questions all converge into one answer: the Internet. The Internet, or more accurately, the Web 2.0 version of it, has been hailed as the "Great Equalizer," a title that public education once held. On the Internet, voices from all different ethnic, cultural, and economic backgrounds can come together, be heard, and all given equal weight in the conversation. "

"The Spaniards only learned about the China trade through the initiative of merchants from Luzon. Two months after the Spaniards had arrived in Cebu, seven or eight Luzon merchants came to see them seeking permission to trade. They said they had met in Panay a native sent there by Spaniards to buy rice. From him they had learned that the Spaniards had an abundance of silver coins.

It appears that Spanish interest in Chinese manufactures was conveyed to the Luzon merchants because soon afterwards, they returned to Cebu with two junks from Mindoro Island laden with Chinese goods."

Flawlessly logical.

"Vulcan

Your species is named after your planet. The Vulcans have seen no logical reason to name their planet and species indifferently. You are the descendants of Surak and his logical reform of Vulcan Society. As a Vulcan, you possess superior logical and reasoning skills, you are impossibly rational, and you can calculate complex mathematical equations in the blink of an eye, however, many races view you as cold, calculated, and sometimes lack proper social skills and emotion. In spite of this, most races desire to enlist Vulcans in their armed forces because of their precise skills and abilities. Live long and prosper."

"Similarly, Philippe Beaujard (2012:120–126, 321–333) argues for a pre-13th-century trade route run by Austronesians, perhaps Malagasy, extending from Madagascar to Southern Arabia via the Swahili coast. This is supported by Ibn al-Mujawir, who travelled to Aden around 1230 and suggested that people from “al-Qumr” (Madagascar), using outrigger canoes, travelled between Madagascar, Kilwa, Mogadishu, and Aden. Austronesians may have frequented Sharma and other Southern Arabian ports, and it is not unreasonable to think that eastern African traders and other workers travelled aboard Austronesian vessels, Arabo-Persian ships, and perhaps, at a later stage,

West Eurasian mtDNA lineages in India: an insight into the spread of the Dravidian language and the origins of the caste system

Abstract There is no indication from the previous mtDNA studies that west Eurasian-specific mtDNA haplotypes were present within India and played a role in the spread of languages and the origins of the caste system. To address these issues, we have sequenced 14,196 individuals (12,008 from this study) and analyzed 132 mtDNA haplotypes (101 new haplotypes) in west Eurasian mtDNA haplotypes. This has led to the identification of two mtDNA haplotypes—H1a1 and H1a2, which are likely to have originated in the Dravidian-speaking populations approximately 65.5–17.5 thousand years ago (kya). The carriers of these mtDNA haplotypes might have settled in South India during the time of the spread of the Dravidian language. In addition to this, we have identified several mtDNA haplotypes (H1a1, H1a2, H1a3, H1a4, H1a5, H1a6, H1a7, H1a8, H1a9, H1a10, H1a11, H1a12, H1a13, H1a14, H1a15, H1a16, H1a17, H1a18, H1a19, H1a20, "But the president's maritime fulcrum policy is still far from global. Indonesia sits on the doorstep of growing disputes in the South China Sea, while Japan is making overtures in the region toward prospective strategic partners. Taking the lead in promoting stability in the surrounding oceans will be a daunting task for the young democracy—but also incredibly necessary."

Jakarta's Ambitions at Sea

Despite aspirations to play a role in global maritime affairs, Indonesia still has a lot of work to do at home, says Cameron White in The Wall Street Journal.

"The first major center of the "Rus" was at Kiev, established in the 9th century. In 988, Vladimir, a prince of the Kievan Rus, was baptized by a Byzantine priest in the old Greek colony of Khersonesos on the Crimean coast. His conversion marked the advent of Orthodox Christianity among the Rus and remains a moment of great nationalist symbolism for Russians. Putin invoked this older Vladimir in a speech last December when justifying his annexation of Crimea."
